I have a controller that has a function, and when that function is called, it saves the data to the database and then returns the user back to the homepage. I am using AngularJS and I don't know what's the best way to clear all the user's variables to be able to return the user back to the homepage. Example The view (home.html): Save The controller (home.js): $scope.save = function() { //save the data to the database return; $window.location.href = "logout.html"; } Here's what I'm trying to do - the user is logged in in the main menu and if he clicks the button, he'll be redirected to the logout.html, the problem is that I have data saved on the main controller, so how do I clear all the variables and array once the user is redirected?
