We have a windows form that displays an XML feed. Sometimes, however, the feed can't be retrieved for certain clients. So, if there is a failure to retrieve the data, I want to display the xml feed (as a label) with "0%" and some kind of progress bar as a label or label in that form. I want to do this in a way that the progress bar is as long as the feed (variable length). I want to avoid using visual studio built in progress bar, and using the built in System.Windows.Forms.ProgressBar component, because I don't know how to insert
