The following list offers answers to the most commonly asked questions about using Photoshop: » How do I create a new document? You create a new document by choosing File → New. A new canvas opens that allows you to create a new image. » How do I add a layer? A layer is a digital instruction, either a rectangular shape or a freehand drawing, with a transparent background (white, for example). You may create layers by using the Rectangle or Lasso tools, as described in this chapter, or by using either the Paint Bucket tool (held down) or the Eraser tool. When you have your drawing on the layer, you can modify it or add other layers on top of it. You can make adjustments to each layer, such as change the size, move it, change the color, or fill it. » How do I delete a layer? Selecting the layer then pressing Delete or Backspace removes the layer without deleting any of the other layers on top of it. You can also press Alt+Backspace (Windows) or Option+Backspace (Mac OS) to remove a layer. » How do I move a layer? Select the layer, and then click the Move tool, or press the M key. Select a new location for the layer and click and drag it to the new location. » How do I duplicate a layer? Select the layer, and then press the Ctrl+J (Windows) or Cmd+J (Mac OS) key combination. A duplicate layer appears below the original. If you then edit the second layer, it will change the original layer, too. » How do I hide a layer? Select the layer and press the H key. The layer becomes invisible; you can still see it if the original layer is partially or completely transparent, but you can't see its contents. » How do I fix a photo? You can use Photoshop's Fill tool to fill in areas where the photo has no detail and replace the existing pixels with pixels from other parts of the photo. You can also use the Eraser tool to fix a photo that has been damaged by dust or pixelation. » How do I combine layers? You can't combine layers directly by simply clicking them together. You must first combine the layers with the Layer Combine command.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a processing apparatus and a processing method that effects, by a reaction, a processing to a specific area of a substrate on the basis of a predetermined rule, a recording medium that records a computer readable program realizing such processing, and a processing apparatus that effects, by a reaction, a processing to a specific area of a substrate on the basis of a predetermined rule. 2. Description of the Related Art A technique has been known in which a predetermined rule is applied to a plurality of groups of neighboring pixels that are formed in a specific area on a substrate, and a processing is effected to each of the groups of neighboring pixels. For example, a processing of detecting the presence or absence of a microscopic dot pattern on a substrate or an etching of a predetermined portion of a circuit pattern formed on a substrate is performed in a manner that a predetermined rule is applied to a plurality of groups of neighboring pixels formed in a specific area of the substrate. For the purposes of detecting the presence or absence of a microscopic dot pattern in this example, the size of a dot pattern to be detected is not necessarily constant, but various sizes, such as a multiple of one dot pattern, may be applied to each of the groups of neighboring pixels. A method has been proposed in which, in the above-mentioned technique, the detection accuracy is improved by making changes in the shape of the groups of neighboring pixels, that is, a different shape is applied to each of the groups of neighboring pixels (see U.S. Pat. No. 6,891,063). A further method has been proposed in which an occurrence frequency of a detection error in a predetermined area is defined, and whether it is necessary to correct the detection result or not is determined on the basis of the occurrence frequency (see US Patent Laid-Open No. 20020145034). A further method has been proposed in which, in a method of detecting a dot pattern by use of a so-called average edge method, a plurality of groups of neighboring pixels arranged in a lattice shape are used to set an average value as the center of the lattice shape, a horizontal direction in the lattice shape is made to be a reference axis, and a dot pattern is detected by use of a difference between a detected value and an average value set as the center of the lattice shape, thereby improving the detection accuracy of the dot pattern (see Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2003-1336).

Esophageal varices in patients with chronic kidney disease, hemodialysis patients, and peritoneal dialysis patients. Cirrhosis and portal hypertension are the major causes of portal hypertension, and esophageal varices have a high risk of bleeding. However, little is known about esophageal varices in patients with chronic kidney disease, hemodialysis (HD) patients, and peritoneal dialysis (PD) patients. We evaluated esophageal varices using upper gastrointestinal endoscopy in patients with chronic kidney disease, HD patients, and PD patients. Between August 2001 and October 2002, we performed upper gastrointestinal endoscopy on 95 consecutive patients. The patients were classified into 4 groups on the basis of their etiology of chronic kidney disease: chronic glomerulonephritis (group 1), diabetes mellitus (group 2), chronic interstitial nephritis (group 3), and hypertension (group 4). The prevalence of esophageal varices was highest in the chronic glomerulonephritis group (58.3%), but the mean age was highest in the HD patient group. The presence of esophageal varices was not related to the severity of chronic kidney disease. Esophageal varices were more prevalent in patients with a past history of esophageal or gastric varices (P < .05). `node.getAttribute('cid').value === 'css').map(node => node.getAttribute('url')); const cssFile = { href: cssUrls.join(',') }; const cssContent = { inline: `root { ${cssUrls.join('``
