Super Cane Magic ZERO is a highly stylized beat 'em up / platform game with a twist. The dynamic, action-packed style gameplay (so from the genre) is known from titles like Double Dragon or The Castlevania series. The outstanding visual style as from the 90s is known from titles like Tetris, Donkey Kong or Spyro the Dragon. The amazing soundtrack, which means that there are several songs which you will not find elsewhere. Double Bumped: Why? Gameplay: Super Cane Magic ZERO is a 2D beat 'em up / platform game with a twist. The player character can move on the floor (on the classic beat 'em up game). In addition to that, you can jump on the ceiling or from a ledge. It is mainly used for the special attacks (e.g. kick or jab). During gameplay the player fights with enemies from the classic beat 'em up and platform game genre. That's a high level. The best description would be to combine the gameplay of Double Dragon with Double Dragon 2. Visuals: The graphics are very stylized. Especially the characters and the environment, which have a very old school feel (as it comes with the 8-bit style). A special highlight is the sprite rendering. There are also several stylized cuts, which are quite amazing. The sound is very similar to the title Double Dragon: The Revenge. Since several tracks of this soundtrack are based on Double Dragon: The Revenge, they are quite easy to understand. Music: The soundtrack offers 60 minutes of music by Susumo Ohta (glasses). The main theme is "Super Cane Magic ZERO". This is a combination of various musical styles, which is quite brilliant. It sounds quite like a mixture of the soundtracks of Tetris and Donkey Kong Country. The pieces are of the type that are quite easy to listen to from the beginning to the end and are quite different with each other. The soundtrack offers 60 minutes of music by Susumo Ohta (glasses). I. The night was ripe, humid, with streaks of lightning waiting to smash down and fill everything with light. The cries, screams, and pounding feet of the crowd in the arena could be heard all the way to where the King and Queen stood. Disrupter Count Guro posted vigil over the arena, informing both the King and Queen that they had minutes to move on; the contest's grand finale was about to begin. In front of them, the smoldering ashes of the burning of the Shrine to the Lost City still remained, lighting up the ground around it. Several buildings were burned to the very ground, and though Guro had not yet noted the start of the ritual, the combined wind and heat from the Shrine made it easy to guess what would start soon. "Hopefully, my friends, nothing this unpleasant will happen to our prize," said the King, as he leaned down and ruffled up the hair of the blonde Queen. The Queen smiled, and looked up into the King's eyes. "We are here because of young growth, you know," the King said. "You seem to be developing quickly to compete with me, Sheila." The Queen replied. "Now, we shall have to make you all talk so that I can try the remaining rites here." "Oh! Quickly, hear my prayers." "Yes, he is a talking humanoid, but I will have to use my trinket to make sure. It will be just a few minutes. Now, Sheila, as we walk with her, remember that she is here for us, not for you. You would do well to remember that; mind makes people sometimes forget who they are." "Are you a horrible person?" "Oh, no. I believe that everyone has their place in life, good or bad. It is just that some of us find joy in doing bad things. Let's take a walk, Sheila." They began walking through a city surrounded by volcanic lava and darkness. Up ahead were the torches of the oracles, all smoking after being exhausted by so many burns; in the distance, lit up the burly silhouette of the King, still visibly powerful despite his advanced age; the Queen was joining him, following him eagerly. Finally, they paused, and the Queen pointed at Sheila, then to herself

'City of Delve' is a Tabletop/Mobile Fantasy Game (RPG) and it's one of the best. Your job is to help the druid in his campaign against evil and your path will be full of fun. Your characters will gain experience and level up. A lot of attention will be on your skills, but a good command over your party and their unique abilities will play a major role. When you press "Next" you will be asked a few questions about your character. Your character background will be created and you'll be given a unique Class. Your character will have a family and a job. Your own decisions will determine your fate. It's up to you if you want to commit yourself to one of the towns in the game and give your character some more history or to simply run from the fate you've drawn for yourself. Just think about it: Adventurers and rogues are great characters in City of Delve. Your character's skills can be set to whatever you want and you are free to explore and upgrade them at your own pace. On top of that, many players will go on their own quest and there you can be a sidekick or even lead the party on the hunt. Sometimes, however, you will have to explore alone. Your party will remain loyal to you and even fight for your character. You decide how far will you go and where you want to go. Do you think your character is strong enough to defeat the dangers that stand in your way? Are you going to help the druid and save the trees or will you just go on your merry way and ignore the dangers? What can we do to make City of Delve even better? There have already been many players asking for more jobs. You can find a ton of campaigns ready for a start, but there is one major problem: You have to gather the energy for all the campaigns. How will you get the energy? There is one way and that's by killing your foes. Which is going to be a problem for the PCs you will meet. Carefully chosen foes will require them to fight, but there are much stronger foes than the ones you are used to fighting.
