I am trying to use the following command: Craft::getQueue('import-template'); This leads to the following error: Method "getQueue" not found. Using the craft command at the commandline, this works fine: craft import-template get: So clearly this is a Craft core bug. I have tried to use the following "hack":

Craft::importTemplate('template'); But that just leads to the following error: Call to undefined function Craft\Craft() A: The Craft team has confirmed that this is a bug and has been submitted as #29175. UPDATE: The bug was marked as "resolved" back in April 2018, so we can probably mark this one as not active again. Q: Macbook Pro 2009 multiple monitors video ram Hi everyone I was wondering if anyone knew what the video ram on a macbook pro 2009 is. I noticed its 4gb. Is this all the ram for that model or is there any video ram that cant be used for anything else? Thanks A: The most important thing to check is that the video ram is e79caf774b

Contoh.In certain electrical connectors, such as the ones depicted in FIGS. 1, 2, 3, and 4, the terminals (or terminals) are coupled to the connector base (or housing) by being sandwiched between the housing and a clamp. The clamp secures the terminals to the housing by holding the terminals in place so that the terminals do not become separated from the housing. The clamp typically is secured to the housing by the molding process. In some connectors, however, there may be a need for terminals to be replaced in the field. For example, as can be seen in FIG. 1, some connectors may have a very large number of terminals. In some connectors, a terminal could possibly need to be replaced because it was damaged or lost. Unfortunately, these connectors may also have a number of electrical terminals that are not easily accessible. In particular, in some connectors, a terminal could be installed in the base (or housing) in a manner such that it may be difficult to remove the terminal from the housing. For example, in some connectors, a terminal could be installed in the base (or housing) in a manner such that a side of the terminal may be received in the base (or housing) and a base of the terminal may be received in an aperture of the base (or housing). These types of connectors may be referred to as blind connectors. Although blind connectors work well in certain applications, there is always a need for a connector that can be easily assembled and/or disassembled. In the case of connectors that include clamps, it may be easier to assemble a connector if the terminals are secured to the housing such that they are not separated from the housing.
