Office 2013-2019 C2R Install Lite v7.00: C++ Template Deduction Not Working? So basically, this code works `template class Tmpl {}; int main() { return 0; }` But this code does not `template template class Tmpl {}; template class Tmpl {}; int main() { return 0; }` I get `g++ -o Tmpl Tmpl.cpp` In file included from `Tmpl.cpp:1:0: Tmpl.h:4:21: error: expected ';' before '' token` I tried it with different compiler and different versions of c++, but it does not work no matter what I do. Why is this and how do I fix it? A: It does not work because you're looking for a specialization with a dependent template parameter, that cannot be declared before you reach it: the function template itself cannot be a specialization. In general the expected result is: `template template class Tmpl {}; template class Tmpl {}; //error: template-id 'iii' in class template specialization 'Tmpl' for function template 'template class Tmpl' int main() { return 0; }` The problem is that you cannot assign a value to the template parameter of the function template without expanding the function at least once, meaning invoking the function definition itself. The compiler sees the specialization function as a template and therefore it expects a matching template argument later. The typical workaround for this is to create a function template with a defaulted template parameter; when the specialization is selected, the default is instantiated. `template class Tmpl {}; // the default template class Tmpl {}; // the specializations int main() { return 0; }` In some cases there is also the possibility to introduce a helper type with

We all put in to get out. It's like the UN, it's a big heavy door, there's always loads of people behind it. Everybody gets their payout. "And then we have a few more friends. Then we talk to the union. What's going on in the plant?" And I said the line everybody waiting to drive away, and the driver had just been in the back office, and come in and said, "I don't have a job, go and talk to mama, I've lost my job, and I'm going to Florida with the boys for the holidays." He goes back, he's on the phone with his mother
