STEEL DIVISION 2 - NEMESIS #4: STORMING TOULON FULL PLAYER REVIEW

The Storming Toulon DLC was released in early March, and since this DLC is a Massive Game the price was starting to increase.

I wish that there was more than just this DLC, but unlike other Steel Division 2 major, we did not have any Major DLCs. This is it, a new real-time strategy is created and shaped by Paradox Development Studio.

The game mainly comes with two maps, Assault Toulon and Redoubt.

Steel Division 2 - Nemesis 4 - Storming Toulon (April-2022)

What's new in Steel Division 2 - Nemesis 4 - Storming Toulon:

Citadel There's a reason all those tanks and cannons were sticking out of the dock and not taking another bath in the ocean. Desperate times require desperate measures. We're still not fully recovered from the potato cannon shenanigans, and now the enemy is positioning units to attack us on multiple fronts. We'll need time to regroup and deal with this threat, but while we can focus on finding a solution, we can still make them tremble in their boots! This time, we'll trade our (hopeful) puny cannon with a much more powerful weapon, the Morale Swarm module. This module will retreat the units at its base, which forces them to lose most of their Production and Economy. Hopefully that will make capturing cities a bit easier. But now, time to charge! Ship Guns and Frost Lances Well, that was fun. One second, we're just enjoying a festival, the next we're infested with psychic horrors. Lucky, we have another brother to call to help us save the day! Man is, after all, a being blessed with a spine. Good thing, too. Though our brother is a bit of a braggart, and this life isn't a walk in the park. He gets back at us (in no small part thanks to our industrious Captain who whipped up a super-weapon) for his mishaps like other folk might joke about a busted elbow. We don't go complaining to Mother Earth. Yet, if every fight has a lesson, the lessons never cease in Steel Division 2. But our calamities have more to offer than rah-rah support. Those cannon guys are going to be a hassle to take over, and yet we're holding out hope of a breakthrough soon. Let's see if we can knock em out before they can send Wavebreakers all over the place. And while we're doing that, let's give our Power Projection module some fresh shells. Same deal—destroy your opponents units to force them to retreat, but only this time we add a flavor of ice!
