The user interface of Photoshop Elements is designed to reduce confusion by making the functions of the software more intuitively understandable. This makes it more efficient and easier to use. With the introduction of the various features such as layers and masking, Photoshop Elements still retains much of the original spirit and look of Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop Elements is a photo editing application which has made many Photoshop versions look like traditional "photoshop" versions. It includes all the tools you need to create digital images, but it has a less intimidating interface. (Image Credit: Adobe) Image Filters Different effects can be added to your images. They are usually applied in one of three ways: Using the "Add Filters" option in the Filter Gallery Creating a new image using the "Image> Apply Filter" option in the Photoshop Elements menu Using the "Filter" option in the Filter Gallery Adding filters is a quick and effective way to retouch your photos. The Filter Gallery is a menu option that has many different filter options (more than 200) that may be applied to the image you are editing. The "Add Filters" option lets you select one of the several different filter options that are available. The filters you choose affect what you see in the layer you are working on. Sometimes it can be difficult to choose the right filter option for your image. This is why there are many different ways to apply filters. Most filters create new layers, and you can use these layers to play with your image until you have the one that works best. Applying Filters There are a number of different ways to apply filters to images in Photoshop Elements. Let us take a look at each of them. Using the "Add Filters" option in the Filter Gallery When you open the Filter Gallery and select an option, it opens up a new window with one or more filter options. The "Add Filters" option lets you select one of the different filter options that are available. In order to add a filter to an image, you must first open the photo. You do this by selecting the photo, and then pressing the button that looks like a small camera. You then select the "Add Filters" option. This will open a window where you can select one of the different types 05a79cecff

Privacy v. surveillance to be discussed at forum November 6, 2013 LANSING - A forum for residents to ask questions about privacy and electronic surveillance will be held in Lansing Nov. 14. The forum is hosted by Code for America, a non-profit group that has more than 400 community teams around the nation using software to improve government services. The goal of Code for America is to democratize technology and civil society in the U.S. The program will be held at the St. John Cantius Catholic Church at 1222 E. Cross St. in Lansing, and admission is free. The event begins at 7 p.m. and is open to the public. Code for America was selected as the Michigan chapter of the national program and is part of TechSoup, a worldwide network of non-profit organizations focused on improving digital access. Participants will be able to pose questions and offer their suggestions through social media and crowd-sourcing, and Code for America can be reached at www.codeforamerica.org. For more information about the event, contact Eileen Ciccarelli, manager of communications, at eciccarelli@codeforamerica.org or (866) CODE-SOAP (262-4476). Code for America will coordinate with local police and city officials regarding traffic restrictions.Measurement of mRNA levels by RT-PCR for quantitation of tissue-specific messenger ribonucleic acid in mice with toxicological potential using the Micromass system. We report a sensitive and reproducible technique for the measurement of tissue-specific messenger RNA (mRNA) levels in mice with toxicological potential. DNA oligonucleotide primers were designed to target a unique sequence in the 3'-untranslated regions (3' UTR) of the housekeeping and target genes of interest. The sense and antisense primer sequences for the housekeeping gene, beta-actin, were: 5'-TCA TCG CCC CCT GCT GCC-3' and 5'-GGG CTT TCT TTG CAG GGT TT-3'. The sense and antisense primer sequences for the target gene, immunoglobulin heavy-chain mRNA, were: 5'-GTG GAG CTC CAT GCC AAC TTC-3' and 5'-CTG AGA AGG GCC TCT GGT GTA G-3'. Use of these primers produces a single amplicon

Q: How do you use Inheritance and Decorators together I have a class called Order which is decorated with the @decorator decorator, my decorator takes in the order object as a parameter and decodes it. @decorator("selected_order_id", Order) class my_view(method): def __init__(self, order): self.order = order def my_function(self): class: if "SELECTED_ORDER_ID" in self.order.__dict__: return self.order.__dict__["SELECTED_ORDER_ID"] This works as expected, but what if i have a same function in two different classes, how can i call the function from a class inside the second class and send the order. What I mean is how do i get the instance of Order to work in the function in the second class inside my_function. If I try Order. A: Like this? @decorator("selected_order_id", Order) class BClass(object): def __init__(self, order): self.order = order @classmethod def my_function(cls, order): class: if "SELECTED_ORDER_ID" in order.__dict__: return order.__dict__["SELECTED_ORDER_ID"] return True All classes that are not defined as your decorator (in this case BClass) will inherit this function from the class you defined the function in. Then you can use it like this: a = AClass() b = BClass() print a.my_function(b) # True print b.my_function(a) # False print a.my_function() # None But notice that this function
