Q: What's a word for mental exhaustion where you have "nothing left to give"? I'm looking for a word that refers to mental exhaustion where you feel tired of dealing with things. Example: He's mentally exhausted. There's nothing he can do to stop the situation from getting worse. Is there a verb that means this? I thought of "cash out". A: After going through a period of stress or trauma, a sufferer may become mentally exhausted, requiring rest. There's also the concept of burnout, which is what happens when too much is exerted on one's body or mind. A: There is the word "stressed" to cover this. A: There is the term burnout: When employees are overwhelmed and emotionally exhausted by the demands of their work and suffer severe emotional or behavioral changes that can impair their effectiveness, they may suffer from burnout. You can then say "He is burnt out" A three-member team in a remote Malaysian village accidentally discovered what has been described as a "super-advanced" modern weapons system mounted on the back of a Malaysian soldier — and immediately returned it back to Malaysian authorities. The devices were installed as part of the Chuchuk high-tech warfare project, which was first proposed by former defense minister Hishammuddin Hussein in 2013, a statement from the Malaysian defense ministry said. The project involves the development of weapons and electronic warfare systems, as well as reconnaissance and early warning systems. It is expected to cost tens of millions of dollars, with 75 percent of the cost covered by funding from a consortium of defense companies led by Aerospatiale SA's Rafale subsidiary. The ministry said in a statement that the Chuchuk project team was on a reconnaissance mission in some jungles near Perak, in the northern part of Peninsular Malaysia, on Aug. 13 when they inadvertently stumbled upon the hidden weapons system. Malaysian defense minister Hishammuddin Hussein was shocked by the discovery. The commission, which included a Royal Malaysian Air Force (RMAF) commander, was tasked with leading the investigation, which was carried out by Malaysian army brigadier-general Zaidi Abdul Ghani Abdul Muthazam, who is the director of RMAF's Integrated Logistics Services
