Silent Hill 2 for Nintendo DS looks great on the GameCube and it.Q: Why are there so many methods for the Upload class in PHP I'm making an upload script and I've found that there are many methods for this class and I don't understand the difference between them. If I want to set the output of the post variable to be a tmp-file is there any difference if I use $target = "/tmp/foo.tmp"; $file = $_FILES[$key]['tmp_name']; move_uploaded_file($file, $target); or $file = $_FILES[$key]['tmp_name']; $target = '/tmp/foo.tmp'; move_uploaded_file($file, $target); I don't understand if it's really any difference or are there other circumstances in which one of them is better than the other one? Thanks in advance. A: They are all the same. The only difference is that: move_uploaded_file($file, $target); will return true on success and false on failure. And: if (!move_uploaded_file($file, $target)) { // do something here } will throw an exception if move_uploaded_file fails. As @Martijn Pieters pointed out, you should not hardcode your filepath. PHP has a nice function to create a temporary file path using a random number: $tmpFileName = tempnam("/tmp", "phptest_file"); A: You can use the move_uploaded_file for validation too. First example: $target = 6d1f23a050
