

My requirements are simple: I wish to download a previously recorded DRM'd VOB on DVD from the internet. I have to be able to connect to the Internet, and create VOB files with a, while being able to decrypt the files. I need to be able to decrypt the files to a plain .avi format. I do not need any compression/encoding. I need to be able to decrypt this VOB file on my iPhone (my files are already on it). A: Here's what I did: 1) Downloaded the R2 plugin and created a file containing my own. The download of the files is successful. 2) Had the R2 plugin export it's contents to a file then used avidemux to import it. 3) Trimmed the file with avidemux as per the end of the file. 4) Added the video files to my iPhone using the VLC file manager. 5) Connected to my computer using a Microhook cable. 6) Installed QuickTime. 7) Opened up the file on my iPhone. The file played successfully. 8) Opened up the VLC file manager, and added the file to it. 9) Connected to my computer. The downloaded files are to a .AVI on the desktop. 10) Placed it on an FTP server on the web. This is the only way I was able to get past the iTunes Connect. But it will not work for most people. It is only a workaround. A SCATHING ANNOUNCEMENT: THE MAIL BOX Perhaps this is old news for some people, but since this blog doesn't allow anonymous comments, I felt it important for me to share the sentiments of a certain angry woman: Dear Movie Mom, I saw the photos of you and your husband at the "Babies in Action" family photo shoot and you looked absolutely furious. Was it the model? Did she look at you and say, "Mom, I know you like me in this outfit, but I would love to wear this outfit too - and be photographed in it"? Did she say she was going to take that off when it was over? Did she talk in your ear ("monstrous") about how petite your baby is? Because I know he's your son

The current World Series champions have yet to come up short in seven trips to the Fall Classic, a streak that spans a combined 24 seasons. And the next postseason starts in just two weeks. Tampa Bay Rays relievers escaped with a wild one in the ninth against Astros closer Will Harris to preserve their season in Game 6 of the American League Division Series. Houston scored the winning run in the eighth, but a wild pitching performance saw the Rays held to one run on two hits and seven base runners in 6 2/3 innings by Houston reliever Roberto Osuna. Houston starter Dallas Keuchel threw a franchise-high 104 pitches and gave up one run in seven innings. Relief pitcher Ryan Pressly entered in the eighth and set down the first two batters of his inning before the Rays got to him on a sacrifice fly by Desmond Jennings. The six-inning game lasted seven hours and 43 minutes, and the 11-inning doubleheader pushed the total elapsed time to 3 hours and 16 minutes. Osuna entered in the eighth with one out and the bases loaded to face J.P. Howell, who struck out after hitting Matt Joyce to load the bases. But later in the inning, former Astro Lance Berkman hit a RBI single that scored two runs to tie the game. Mark Melancon entered in the ninth for the Astros and struck out Desmond Jennings to cap a huge inning. Melancon then threw a wild pitch that plated Justin Bour to give the Rays a one-run advantage.
