In the following example I don't understand the usage of "he" here. I don't know why it takes it. What I have been thinking is the he could be an indirect object. As the sentence starts with "I", I think the it is a subject, and the "He" is the subject. Why do we use "he" here? A: This is a rather unusual sentence, so I might be incorrect.

One possibility is that we have the subject of this verb ("I") saying the verb (so my original idea of "He" is the subject) and the object of the verb ("it") is being mentioned before the verb ("takes it"). I can't confirm this, but the only other option would be to have something like this: I don't know why it takes it. as the object of "t c6a93da74d"
