is one of my favorite donnie yen films and its a must for fans of mma because it has tons of ground fighting and some great final fights. its also a nice excuse to watch chinese action films because there is no martial arts action in this one (apart from a few close up fist fights and a few moves). if you dont know who donnie yen is, than check this out. if you do, then you need to watch this. {ez_ad donnie yen film i have yet to watch is ip man 2 and it is only because i cant find a copy of this in english. i have seen plenty of others and was really impressed with the martial arts choreography and the action scenes that were carried out in this film. other than that, i have yet to watch any of donnie yen s other films. thanks to the internet, i am able to watch them but its taking a while to find english subtitled copies of his films. so, if you see this, please help. {ez_ad_units.push([[300,250], 'm should like this film because of the action scenes and the fights. the fights are awesome and there are several good fights throughout the film. the fights vary from wrestling, jiu jitsu, and striking. they also have some fights that use only grappling and standup. the action scenes are well choreographed and well shot. however, the biggest reason i like this film is because of donnie yen. as i said earlier, he is quite possibly the best actor in the chinese film industry and his performance is mesmerizing. the character he plays is a tough as nails cop working for the government and when his life is threatened, he has to rely on his wits to survive. of course, he has to do his job but he also makes it his job to take down a gang leader who threatens his family.

the film is a bit more graphic than the donnie yen films. i.e. killing storm, donnie yen. killing storm is more violent. the first 10 minutes of this film is just brutal. i was not expecting this much blood and it was all intentional. all in all this is a decent martial arts film. the action is pretty good. i liked the throw-down at the start. most of the fight scenes are not overly exciting and the ending was a let down. but i will see it again. i enjoyed the fact that it was more violent. this is a great watch, it s hard to believe that this was shot and finished in only a few months as it feels like a labor of love. the story is similar to the over the top 3 donnie yen films, with similar plot twists and a great ending. the story is about a mob kingpin who is bent on revenge for the murder of his family. the story is broken down into a series of flashbacks that follow the characters development of his personality and ability to stay alive. the story is not overly complicated, there are just so many interesting plot twists and things to keep you interested. the main characters are believable, the actors are all very believable and for the most part play their roles very well. it s the fights that i feel are the weakest part of the movie. they are just so easy to predict, something i rarely see in a martial arts film. the story is about a mob kingpin who is bent on revenge for the murder of his family. the story is broken down into a series of flashbacks that follow the characters development of his personality and ability to stay alive. the story is not overly complicated, there are just so many interesting plot twists and things to keep you interested. the main characters are believable, the actors are all very believable and for the most part play their roles very well. it s the fights that i feel are the weakest part of the movie. they are just so easy to predict, something i rarely see in a martial arts film. 5ec8ef588b
