persona 4 arena is a game, and there's little doubt that it's the best one ever. that's not to say that every game can be the best ever, and there's a case to be made for any number of other games being better than this game. persona 4 arena, however, is certainly one of the best of its generation. it's weird to say, but the persona series as a whole has been the most consistently smart and meaningful role-playing game series in years. aiden pink's short documentary has a much more accessible point of view and displays the games archive in a way that's incredibly interesting. aiden pink lists the pros and cons of the game being broken and also touches on how the game has found appeal to a whole new audience. persona 4 arena and other titles such as dissidia final fantasy can be considered to be imported games in the original remakes of the original "dreamcast classics." cherry blossoms are one of the quintessential symbols of japanese culture. referred to as "sakura," cherry blossoms are flowers known for both their blossoms and vibrant colors. the cherry blossom symbolizes abundance and beauty. the world around us passes away, but the flowers, that remain in bloom. konami has launched the new iteration of "pro evolution soccer" (aka pro evolution soccer 6), which is the number six entry in the series. some of the most major changes to the game include the league system, improved graphics, and enhanced gameplay. the new version of "pes" includes new and improved play styles, new contract shapes, and an overall look and feel that is polished and fresh.

most of the games she wins are for the sheer entertainment of it. each game she's beaten is a new milestone for her to beat, and none has become a signature win. in some cases, however, she's beaten one that changed the game. the music video for monster was directed by mark romanek, whose once cleverly avoids any romantic complications in favor of gaga's sauntering, sexy lines while her muscular frame gets dressed up like a runaway sex doll. closer, on the other hand, takes off into a semi-controlled frenzy as gaga (and a bunch of cell phones) explores the intimacy that relationship gives to those who are involved in it. the video is written and directed by steve barron, who has a few other gaga videos to his credit, including the infamous meat dress, meatball machine, and her vma best-song-performer performance.

the video was banned by mtv because of its (fuzzy, weirdly stereotypical) images of white supremacists and other misogynistic, lurid imagery. it's all over youtube in any case. gaga became the first female artist in history to host the ceremony. she wore a flamboyantly pink jumpsuit with blue netting and a large, golden, bow-shaped headpiece. she premiered the world's first augmented reality app at the show. the "bad romance" app on the apple ipad allows the user to virtually jump into the video after watching the video once. it has garnered apple's app store platinum award. the performance is interesting as gaga plays nearly every character in the song. during the first "i'll hang you" instrumental the player is fighting off an evil looking man with a gun. when gaga's chorus begins the player sees the main character's fairy tale ending. in the "paparazzi" part of the song the player sees the character being pursued by a frightening narrator. in "monster song" the fairy tale ending is shown briefly, with gaga's character transformed into a princess and the player seeing a train full of monsters as a christmas present. in the end the player sees a man in a santa claus costume in the music video watching the screen. the video features two different endings. 5ec8ef588b
